

Jeremy Palmer

Head of Financial Policy

Jeremy is the Head of Financial Policy at the Building Societies Association, representing societies' interests on prudential regulation and treasury management.

Before joining the Association in 2008, he worked at the Financial Services Authority on regulatory policy for both building societies and credit unions, having moved across to the FSA from the former Building Societies Commission where he started in 1989.

Up until 1989 he worked in merchant banking.
